ANTIOCH VOTE FAVORS BONUS, BEER AND WINE

Local Voters Are Evenly
Divided on New Court House

DEMOCRAT VOTES FEW

The latest reports before going to press were that the Bonus proposition carried in Lake County by a 10,966 to 3331 plurality, and that the State would carry the issue by a 4 to 1 vote. The Beer and Light Wines proposition carried in Lake County by a 8,180 to 3,868 plurality, and that the State would carry the issue by a 4 to 1 plurality. The Lake County Courthouse special tax and bond issue won by a 7719 to 5547 plurality.

All Republicans carried away Lake County offices, and the only real battle on the ballot was that for Representatives of which Francis carried away the honors with a total of 19,957, Weiss was second with 19,453 and Pierce third with 17,377. Hayes, the only Democrat to make a showing, carried away 14,959 votes.

Antioch cast a total vote of 442 at the polls on Tuesday, 279 being cast in the first precinct and 163 in the second precinct. In Antioch the soldiers' bonus proposition carried about three to one, while the vote for the return of light wines and beer carried by 232 to 141, 69 voters failing to voice their opinion on this issue. The ballot for the additional tax and bonds for enlarging the courthouse in Waukegan lost by a small majority before the local voters. The following is the way Antioch voted by precincts:

F. Van Patten and occupied by him as living rooms above, while the lower floor was occupied by Sabir and Webb as a harness store, the buildings being situated on the east side of Main street and south of the News office.

Charge Harmer Women Uncapable of Business Deals

Four physicians testified last week before Eugene M. Runyard, master in chancery, that Mrs. Nellie Harmer and Mrs. Casadina McGuire, who until recently owned a fine farm at Hickory Corners, are incapable of attending to business affairs, in a lawsuit which has grown out of the three cornered trading of the farm for a store at Spring Grove and the Cameron restaurant in Waukegan and which has resulted in conspiracy charges against four prominent men.

Drs. M. J. Kaye, Florence Stone, J. E. Walter of Waukegan and H. E. Jamieson, Milburn, testified that they are mentally unable, in their opinion, to transact ordinary business.

The charge of conspiracy stands against Harvey S. Dickson of Gurnee, L. J. Slocum of Wadsworth, James A. Reeves of Waukegan and J. J. Friend of Spring Grove.

Dickson now owns the farm at Hickory Corners and has been conducting the Cameron restaurant. Recently, however, Atty. E. V. Orris succeeded in getting an injunction restraining him from disposing of the farm until the case is settled by the court.

The plaintiff, Ray Harmer, of Waukegan, says that his mother, Mrs. Nellie Harmer, and her sister, Mrs. McGuire, were unable to transact business at the time they disposed of the farm for a store owned by Friend at Spring Grove. He claims that the farm and equipment were worth $11,000 and that the goods at the store was worth only $1,500 while the store building is not worth more than $2,000, but that the four men split a commission of $1,200 four ways in the transaction.

Harmer claims that his mother has been ill for 19 years and at the present time weighs only 45 pounds, and that his mother and sister placed a boy in charge of the store, they being incapable of running it. As a result, he charges, the merchandise was dissipated.

A report of the master in chancery is expected soon in the matter.

AUTO CRASH CASE IS DISMISSED IN COURT
The case of L. P. Wilcox against Harry Smith, both of Channel Lake, was dismissed in Justice James' court on Saturday due to insufficient evidence. The accident occurred the latter part of August when the two machines collided at Smart's hill on Channel Lake road. The damage to the Wilcox machine was estimated at $300. The Smith machine was but slightly wrecked.

Armistice Day Celebration Has Many Features

Band Concert, Speakers, Football, Fireworks and the Firemen's Ball Is Included in the List of Events for Armistice Day Celebration at Antioch

FESTIVITIES START AT 12:30 O'CLOCK SHARP

Saturday, Armistice Day, will be celebrated in Antioch as a patriotic holiday. Arrangements have been completed and the celebrations will start promptly at 12:30 noon with selections from a twenty-piece brass band. At 1:00 o'clock an address will be given by Col. A. V. Smith, State's Attorney, of Waukegan, and by Clarence Diver, a prominent attorney, of Waukegan. A platform will be erected in Main street appropriately for the occasion and the business houses in a body have approved the decorating of their stores to do justice to the "Stars and Stripes" on that day.

At 2:30 the band will proceed to the Antioch High School grounds where the local high school team will meet Crystal Lake in a football game. Two weeks ago Antioch defeated Crystal Lake in a very close and exciting game at the latter's gridiron. At the close of the game festivities will be resumed in the business section with the entertainment produced by a professional organization.

The Antioch Fire Department will have charge of the traffic during the proceedings, and in the evening the Sixth Annual Firemen's Ball will be held in the Antioch Opera House. Music for this occasion will be furnished by Schmidt's orchestra and an oyster supper will be served in Woodman Hall.

Day bombs will be exploded in the afternoon which will be heard for miles and in the evening a number of glares will light the skies.

Preparations are being made to handle an exceptionally large gathering which is expected to surpass that of Ford Day.

"What the Community Can Expect from the Schools"

(By Mrs. W. J. Darby)

The following is part of a discussion presented before the Woman's Club at their meeting on Monday afternoon, of which the topic was "What the Community Can Expect from the School," which was presented by Mrs. W. J. Darby:

Madam Chairman,
Members of the Woman's Club:
In justice to myself, please allow me a few words of explanation before I give to the club this hastily prepared paper. Through some slip in the program I am before you in the capacity of a "gap filler." Only a few days at the end of a busy week were given me in which to prepare a statement of all the things we as a community think we have a right to expect from the schools. In the limited time at my disposal I have not attempted details nor statistics, but will discuss the subject only in its broad general lines.

Mr. Bright, representing the schools, has well told what the school has a right to expect of us as a community. We have no quarrel with the demands made—and we believe that a dispassionate discussion of the rights of both sides will result only in good. You will notice that the discussion is based upon what each side has a right to expect from the other.

To have a right to expect certain results implies that certain requirements and conditions which could make possible those results have been met.

That the people of this community,

DOLLAR DAY IS NOV. 18

November 18 will be "Dollar Day" in Antioch. Due to the completion of the road through the business section conditions are now so that business is rounding into shape again and every merchant of any importance will have sales in which a dollar will do wonders. If you are contemplating any early Christmas shopping, or are in need of household goods save your shopping tour until Saturday, November 18, and your dollar will buy, on an average, 25 percent more than it will on any other day or in any other town. Remember the date, November 18.

Tombstones Are Broken at Mill Creek Cemetery

Some twenty-five monuments and tombstones in the Mill Creek cemetery, located between Wadsworth and Rosecrans, were knocked over, a good share of them being totally destroyed, sometime Thursday night or during the early hours Friday morning.

The destruction of the monuments and tombstones, without a doubt, is the worst act of vandalism ever committed in Lake County.

The wreck at the Mill Creek cemetery was discovered by George Cashmore, a mailman on an R. F. D. route, working out of the Wadsworth office. Cashmore was driving by the cemetery shortly after noon Friday and noticed stones that had been overturned and broken. He immediately made a report to Rev. J. B. Foley, pastor of the Catholic church at Wadsworth, who has charge of the cemetery, and the matter was taken up with the authorities.

"I cannot conceive of anybody so low as to go into a graveyard and destroy sacred property," said Miss Ethel Dietmeyer, who lives two miles from Mill Creek, and one of the first persons to visit the cemetery after the destruction had been reported.

According to Miss Dietmeyer, almost all of the inhabitants of Wadsworth and Mill Creek visited the cemetery and the people of both communities are so rolled up over the vandalism that if the criminals are caught in that vicinity, it will go "hard" with them.

Two of the biggest monuments wrecked were the Father Foley and Father Guerin monuments. Other monuments and stones destroyed or partly destroyed are those of Jeremiah Shea, Timothy Kelly, George Shea, Nicholas Lux, John Lux, Peter Neyer and Timothy Reardon.

Free Bicycle Campaign Closes November 25

Hurry up kids, the campaign for new subscribers to The Antioch News is going to close on Nov. 25. Most of the boys and girls that entered the campaign to secure a bicycle or wrist watch free for getting subscriptions are speeding things up the last two weeks and all are hustling with the idea of a witch or bike in mind.

A number of out-of-town boys and girls started the past week and will have to "make it snappy" to catch up with the others, although everyone ought to be able to land one of the offers.

MAIL AND PAPERS DELAYED BY DISCONTINUED TRAIN

Antioch received another serious setback due to the Soo Line railroad Monday when they discontinued the service of train No. 14, known as the "milk train." This train had in the past supplied Antioch with its early morning mail and the Chicago morning papers, which were brought from Chicago on Train No. 1. The mail was thrown off at Burlington and brought back to Antioch on No. 14. As the situation now stands the mail and papers do not get at the postoffice until nearly 11 o'clock and the papers are not placed in the boxes until noon. The rural routes now receive their papers one day late.

Train No. 7 now leaves Chicago at 2:30 and arrives Antioch at 4:42.

Train No. 8, formerly leaving Antioch 9:54, will leave Antioch at 9:48.

Train No. 6 that formerly left Antioch at 4:56 p. m. will leave at 5 o'clock.

START WORK ON NEW THEATRE

500 Seat Modern Theater
Building on Main Street

P. E. CHINN IS OWNER

Ground was broken the latter part of the week for Antioch's new theater. The site located between the village hall and the Masonic building will be converted into a modern theater building containing approximately a five-hundred seating capacity. P. E. Chinn, owner of the Crystal theater, is the promoter of the new venture.

The building will be the very latest in every respect, the main floor seating about four hundred, while the balcony will contain about one hundred seats. The building will be fireproof throughout. A lobby about twenty feet deep will be provided for its patrons, and a store space suitable for a candy store or offices will be built in front.

The interior will be elaborately finished and a stage, suitable for the largest of traveling shows, will adorn the rear of the building.

The construction is under the direction of Fred Warner of Channel Lake, and Mr. Chinn will spare no expense in getting the new structure completed.

With the high-class features the Crystal has been offering it has been impossible to accommodate its patrons and many have either had to wait until the second show or else be turned away, and Mr. Chinn believes that he must enlarge his theater to meet the demand of the ever-increasing patronage.

The new theater will play only the latest features at all performances.

Find Indian Skeletons at Channel Lake

While excavating for the new summer home of Mrs. W. H. Gifford at Channel Lake, the workmen dug up eight Indian skeletons from a mound. They were about four feet from the surface and each grave was marked with a large stone and smaller ones around the grave. The stones seemed to be placed on a level with the body.

Only one good head was saved as the others had fallen apart. Mr. Gifford took the head to Chicago and presented it to the Presbyterian hospital.

AUCTION SALES

There will be an auction sale on Thursday, Nov. 16, on the farm known as the John Crawford farm, located 3 1/2 miles northwest of Russell and two miles east of Pikeville. Fifty-five head of livestock will be placed on sale, together with much hay, grain and farm machinery. The sale will start at 11 o'clock and the selling will be in charge of L. J. Slocum. The property is owned by Richards & Anderson.

An auction sale of interest will be held Friday, Nov. 10, at the McGuire farm at Camp Lake. The bills sent out do not do justice to the amount and quality of the articles to be placed on sale, according to S. H. (Stub) Goodman, who is to be the auctioneer. Farm machinery, household goods and some livestock were advertised, but Mr. Goodman assures all who are looking for good farm and household articles that they will find a good assortment of first class stuff at this sale. Sale starts at 1 o'clock sharp.

SUNDAY SERVICES:

Sunday School 9:45
Morning Service 11:00
Epworth League 7:00
Evening Service 7:45

Our first Quarterly Conference is this Friday evening.

The new type of Sunday evening program has met with instant enthusiastic response. The music last Sunday evening was of high quality and full of inspiration, and there were expressions of heartiest appreciation. VanDyke's "The Source" was so interpreted as to bring out its inner significance and made a strong impression.

The coming Sunday evening program will feature some excellent music by the Harmonium Quartet, a story and song of "The House That Stood by Storm," and other attractive elements.

The mystery theme, "Who was Melchizedek?" last Sunday morning, proved of special interest.

The valley of the Dead Sea was invaded by five kings who defeated the four kings of the valley and carried off their property and many of the people to the north. A messenger escaped and ran twenty miles west to the highlands, where Abraham lived, and told him of the great catastrophe and that his nephew, Lot, was among those carried off.

Abraham hastily formed an army of 318 men, and with the small armies of two petty kings allied with him, made forced marches northward, overtook the invaders, defeated them in battle, killed many of them and recaptured and brought back the captives and their goods.

On the way back he was met by Melchizedek, who blessed him in the name of "The Most High God" and to whom Abraham delivered one tenth of all the property recaptured. Who was Melchizedek?

The solution was sought in a careful examination of Hebrews 7:1 to 3: Here we read first, that he was "The Priest of the Most High God." This exalts him to the highest possible priesthood. But next we read that he was also King. King of what? The text says he was King (Melchizedek). That is the meaning of his name. Now where was ancient Zedek?

What realm was it? The spade has never discovered any such realm. But the text tells us in the next breath that Zedek means Righteousness. What can this mean? But now the text says he was also King of Salem. And then adds that Salem means Peace.

Melchizedek is king of two strange realms: the Realm of Righteousness and the Realm of Peace. The vision of earthly kingdoms, dissolves, and, as we gaze, there forms the vision of the realm of the spirit, and the dawn of the truth bursts upon us that this our Melchizedek is king of no realm of earth, but the Everlasting King of the great realm of moral values and spiritual destinies. And now we look across the centuries and see Him stand in all majesty and declare before Pilate, "My kingdom is not of this world." Others are servants of righteousness; He alone is King of Righteousness. Others are servants of peace, He only can be King of Peace.

And our author here tells us that Abraham paid tithes to this our great Melchizedek, our Christ, the world's Messiah, and that we also pay our tithes to Him. What for? What does He want of the billions of dollars that will roll into His treasures when we all pay Him our tithes? This it is: His Kingdom of Righteousness must be established and must occupy the entire field of the world's life. And peace can come only after righteousness. And millions of battles everywhere must be fought before righteousness has all the field. And the billions of tithes will all be needed to win the kingdom's final victory.

The morning theme the coming Sunday is "The Sword That Cuts All Knots."

REGULAR SERVICES

Holy Communion. 8:00 a. m.
(Except 3d Sunday)
Church School. 9:45 a. m.
Morning Prayer. 11:00 a. m.
Holy Eucharist. 11:00 a. m.
(Third Sunday of Month)

Last Sunday was a red-letter day for St. Ignatius' Church. The Church School was held as usual and the attendance was good. In addition to the regular lesson, Mr. Brock explained the Eucharistic vestments of the Church. They are the descendants of the clothes that were actually worn at the time of our Lord, and they have come down to us with little change. They consist of five pieces, the alb, the amice, the maniple, the stole and the chasuble. The alb represents purity, the amice stands for the helmet of salvation, the maniple was originally a napkin, the stole represents the cords by which we are bound to Christ, and the chasuble, the outer garment, and the most beautiful one, represents the seamless robe of Christ. All of these clothes were originally utilitarian, but they gradually took on a symbolic meaning. By using them we are connected directly with the Historic Church of Christianity. Using them also is a sign of the continuity of the Christian Church from the day of its birth until now.

At Morning Prayer there was a splendid attendance, and the music and spirit of the service was exceptionally fine. Mr. MacTaggart at the organ played his part well, and the hymns and chants were entered into with an inspiring spirit. It was a very great pleasure to have Mrs. James E. Bell with us, who not only sang a solo at the Offertory, but also led all the hymns and chants. Mrs. Bell has a truly wonderful voice and it was a great treat for the people of St. Ignatius', Antioch, to have her with us. The solo was entitled, "Come Ye Blessed," and the full text of it was, "Then shall the King say unto them upon his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." It was a real pleasure for Mr. Brock to have his sister pay us this visit, and we hope that she may come to us again.

Next Sunday is the Twenty-Second Sunday after Trinity, and the services will be as usual. Church School and Instruction at 9:45 in the morning. Morning Prayer and Address at 11:00. As yet we have not heard whether a new Priest-in-charge has been appointed for Libertyville and Antioch, but we hope that an appointment will soon be made so that the Eucharistic services will be resumed. It is difficult for churchmen to be without the Sacraments of the Church. As soon as an appointment is made, the fact will be announced and the time of Holy Communion will be set.

FIFTEEN RABBITS IS HUNTERS' DAILY LIMIT
Rabbits may be sought by hunters, commencing with Nov. 1, with a daily limit of fifteen. The open season lasts three months. The bunnies are not in demand until arrival of cold weather, with a slight fall of snow. Rabbits are the only game which may be sold in the state or exported to another state, the sale and export of all other game birds and animals being prohibited by the state game laws. Hunters will likely find difficulty in rounding up rabbits or game birds this fall, due to the ever increasing animosity of farmers. The men who till the soil have been organizing protective associations all over northern Illinois, the object of which is to keep hunters off their tracts, and also to prosecute any who violate warning signs.

COMMUNICATION

"The Understudy" at Crystal Theatre Next Wednesday

On Sept. 30th Roger Latta, a fourteen year old boy living in LaGrange was killed while helping a companion erect an aerial for a radio outfit.

His companion had given him the end of a wire to hold and had then thrown the wire over the Public Service Company's line. This caused a circuit to be forced through the boy's body, which resulted in his death.

This accident has been widely discussed in the safety organization of our company and every means to prevent a recurrence has been considered.

In transmitting sufficient current to supply service for all the needs of a community, it is necessary to use voltages higher than that at which the current is carried into the house. The use of radio sets is harmless; however, when the aerial is installed near or over these lines a hazard is created. In addition to this it is also true that the effectiveness of the set is considerably affected when the aerial is placed in certain positions relative to our wires.

This company will be glad to cooperate with anyone having a radio set or proposing to install one and will send an inspector to see if the location is safe and is such that the action of the set will not be affected.

FIGHTING CORN ROOTWORM

Of all corn pests in the South, one of the most serious is the larva, or young, of the 12-spotted cucumber beetle—the so-called southern corn rootworm. Attacked plants either die outright or are so badly stunted as to be unproductive. One control measure advised by the United States department of agriculture is the burning over of wast places, such as the borders and terraces of fields, such as the borders and terraces of fields. Large numbers of the beetles are destroyed in this way. It should be done in the winter and on cool days when the beetles congregate in the dead grasses, seeking protection from the cold. The killing of one female in winter is as important as would be the destruction of from 400 to 600 worms in the spring.

SOIL CONDITIONS INFLUENCE NIGHT AIR TEMPERATURES
A relation has been shown to exist between the temperature of the soil and the ensuing minimum temperature of the air immediately above, says the weather bureau of the United States department of agriculture.

Low night-air temperatures in garden and truck farms may often be prevented by the selection of soil in which there is a sandy component, as sand and sandy loams generally store up more heat during the day than do most other soils and give off more in the nighttime by conduction to the air above, thus diminishing the probability of critical temperatures and the formation of damaging frosts. The land in use should be well drained of surplus moisture, as wet soils are invariably cold soils and more susceptible to frost damage. Any soil, whether it be sand, loam or clay, is warmer when it is clean and free from weeds and unnecessary vegetation.

Frost may form on one side of a street and not on the other, or in one section of a level farm and not in another, for one or more of several reasons, such as difference in soils, slight difference in elevation, in moisture, or in kind and extent of surface covering, or the amount of insulation received. Frost may appear in sections which have wet, cold soils covered with heavy vegetation or uncultivated, while on the same night and under the same meteorological conditions it does not form on other ground close by where the soil is relatively dry, warm and clean.

Selfish Parent.

He was blonde and blue-eyed and seven years old at most, this youngster, who was complaining about the way his father treated him.

"Oh, gosh, I hate to go home. My father's so selfish. You can't guess how selfish my father is."

"Selfish?" said an old man, all tenderness in his tone.

"Yes, selfish," said the lad. "Why, he wouldn't ever think of lending me his washrag or his toothbrush. Not ever."

Rev. B. M. Bridges Gives Facts in His Case

It is doubtful if there has ever been a medicine endorsed by so many ministers of the Gospel as has Tanlac. Indeed, there is scarcely a faith, creed or denomination in all the land in which one, or more, of the clergymen has not publicly expressed their indebtedness to the Premier Preparation for the benefits they have derived from its use.

One of the latest to speak out in this connection is Rev. B. M. Bridges, a widely known and beloved Baptist preacher, residing at Mooresboro, N. C., whose statement follows:

"Tanlac has given me a good appetite, toned up my system and renewed my strength in such a gratifying way that I am glad to recommend it to anyone who is in a run-down condition. For ten years past I have had such a severe case of indigestion that I could not find anything to eat that agreed with me. Finally I became very nervous and could get but very little sleep or rest."

"It seems that I took nearly everything trying to get myself right, but nothing helped me until I ran across Tanlac. My nerves are so much better now that my sleep is sound and refreshing. I enjoy my meals and have also gained weight. I can say from experience that Tanlac is a splendid medicine and tonic, for it has built me up wonderfully."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.—Advertisement.

On the Anxious Seat.
At the Brightwood branch library one little girl was much interested in the book-reading contest. However, she wasn't interested to the extent that she would make the effort to read the ten books necessary to receive a diploma.

After the contest was closed and the winners had received their diplomas, she remarked, "If there are any diplomas left, I believe I will take one."—Indianapolis News.

New Book Ends Invented.

Because book ends relying on their weight have a tendency to slide apart on smooth tables an inventor has patented a pair mounted on rollers and held together with a spring to keep them against books between them.

Perhaps a woman wants to cheat the custom house because it might get a head start and cheat her.

Our Patriots.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts was discussing office seekers. "They are the bane of a legislator's existence," he cried, adding, "and most of them seem to think that government positions are nothing but graft. It never seems to occur to them that it takes able workers to carry on the machinery of the greatest government in the world."

"Why, the other day, in talking to a candidate for a really important position requiring a good all-round education, I discovered that the fellow actually thought that South Bend was a morning exercise."

Births and Deaths in England.
The report of the registrar general for England and Wales for 1922, just issued, shows the highest marriage rate yet recorded—20.2 per one thousand of population; the highest birth rate since 1900—25.5 per one thousand; and the highest natural increase by births over deaths of any period ever recorded in the history of the country. England and Wales added almost 500,000 to their population by natural increase during this year. The number of deaths was the lowest since 1892, when the population was half that of 1920.—The Living Age.

An Early Helicopter.

While inventors in Washington, Chicago and Dayton are working in secrecy to construct a practical helicopter, D. E. Garber, airplane expert of the division of mechanical technology of the Smithsonian Institution, is making a model of the first promising design of this type of vertically rising aircraft.

This model, soon to be added to the National museum, is being built after the design of Sir John Cayley, the Englishman who is regarded as the father of modern aeronautical science. Mr. Garber says that this design, made in 1843, was astonishingly sound in principle, although the body of the Cayley machine was fancifully fashioned after that of a bird with a bird head carved on the prow. Vertical lift was to be obtained by two windmill-like propellers which were to act as a sustaining plane when the machine was driven horizontally by another propeller situated at the rear. Equilibrium was obtained in much the same way as the most successful of the recent European helicopters.

Sir John Cayley showed in his writings, however, that he realized that aerial navigation depended upon new material and power such as has been found in aluminum and gasoline.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Waters are rejoicing over the arrival of a little daughter, Clara Lucille, on Monday, Nov. 6. Mother and daughter are doing nicely.

Great delight and enthusiasm was shown by the people of Antioch in honoring one of its oldest citizens.

When the Ladies' Aid society of the M. E. Church met with Mrs. Sarah Pullen last Thursday they learned that Monday, Nov. 6th, was Mrs. Pullen's 84th birthday and they unanimously voted to celebrate the event in fitting manner. Committees were appointed to select a little remembrance and a birthday cake and plans were made to hold a reception at her home on Monday afternoon at 1:30. It was an entirely informal affair and an effort was made to get word to all of her friends as far as possible, and a large number met at Mrs. Ziegler's and marched over in a body and took Mrs. Pullen entirely by surprise. She looked out and saw them, and said, "What a lot of women! Where are they all going?" As she continued to look she saw them turning in at her place and it began to dawn on her what it all meant. Mrs. Lydia Story, life-long friend, had dropped in to spend a little time, as has been her custom on Mrs. Pullen's birthday, and Mrs. Pullen went to where she was sitting and said, "Lydia, did you know anything about this?" Lydia was innocent. By this time the rooms were well filled and everyone was greeting Mrs. Pullen and expressing hearty wishes for a "Happy Birthday" and "Many happy returns of the day."

After a few minutes the shades were drawn and a large cake covered with 84 candles, whose shining rays lighted the room dimly and seemed to send good cheer in every direction, was placed on the dining table. It took four "big blows" by the guest of honor to extinguish all the candles but she did it in a way that caused much merriment. The shades were then raised and in a few well chosen words Mrs. Clara Turner presented Mrs. Pullen a beautiful cut glass spoon tray as an expression of love from her many friends. Mrs. Straghan recited a very fitting and appropriate poem, "The Folks We Used to Know." Other guests continued to arrive every few minutes, some bringing with them cards and other gifts of love. Mrs. Pullen proved to be a most charming hostess and greatly delighted those present by reciting a poem and telling of a very thrilling experience with Indians that occurred in her girlhood home in Wisconsin.

At the Woman's Club

Sunday, Nov. 12 is Red Cross Sunday (with a follow-up on Monday and Tuesday).

The Chicago chapter of American Red Cross, in a letter to the Woman's clubs throughout the district, calls attention to the sixth annual roll call to be inaugurated on the above date.

The moving principle of this campaign is to give everyone an opportunity to become a member of the Red Cross, or to pay his annual dues, as the case may be.

The Antioch Woman's Club has appointed the former Red Cross membership chairman, Miss Elizabeth Webb, to serve in this capacity during the three day roll call campaign. Membership may be taken and dues paid at the Racket Store.

As patriotic Americans we are all equally interested in the condition of our returned soldier boys.

We remember that five years ago there marched away from our American homes more than two millions of our boys in the splendid pride of their young manhood, full of plans and hopes for the future. Many of them returned maimed, broken, discouraged, knowing not which way to turn in search of health, proper or government compensation, and with countless problems to be met and solved.

Membership in the Red Cross enables us to put our sympathy and patriotism into tangible and practical form.

There should be a Red Cross flag in every home by Nov. 14.

The Woman's Club has secured a sufficient number of copies of the proposed new constitution to be able to place one in the hands of every interested club member who desires to become enlightened upon the proposition we are to decide at the ballot box December 12th.

It is as much a woman's duty to vote as it is to pray. "Faith without works is dead." In these days there is absolutely no excuse for failure to vote or for going blindfolded to the polls, and ignorantly and carelessly putting a cross in the circle.

Secure your copy of this proposed new constitution. Read up, think up, then at the ballot box, Dec. 12th, give the world the result of your best conclusions.

By the way, the members of the Woman's Club are to enjoy a program of unusual interest at the next meeting. Those who have signified their intention to become members will do well to send in the name now in order to enjoy the good things prepared for you.

The Woman's Club is a force for good in Antioch and it needs every good woman. Send in your name to Mrs. A. G. Felter.

Armistice Day

It is four Years

What memories! What thankfulness and joy moved every heart to its deepest depths that day! The heavy load of haunting fear was lifted from millions of hearts that dreaded every new day lest it bring tidings of the death of a loved one on the battle front.

That day, in our thankfulness to God for His mercy in giving us peace, we gave Him sacred pledge that we would always honor our hero dead by unselfish living and working for the high things for which they died and always show our lasting gratitude to our brave boys who came back to us.

Now we live those sacred hours over again and renew that sacred pledge.

Erskine Dale — Pioneer

By John Fox, Jr.

"I CAN WAIT"

SYNOPSIS.—To the Kentucky wilderness outpost commanded by Jerome Sanders, in the time immediately preceding the Revolution, comes a white boy fleeing from a tribe of Shawnees by whom he had been captured and adopted as a son of the chief Kahtoo. He is given shelter and attracts the favorable attention of Dave Yandell, a leader among the settlers. The boy warns of the coming of a Shawnee war party. The fort is attacked, and only saved by the timely appearance of a party of Virginians. The leader of these is fatally wounded, but in his dying moments recognizes the fugitive youth as his son. At Red Oaks, plantation on the James river, Virginia, Colonel Dale's home, the boy appears with a message for the colonel, who after reading it introduces the bearer to his daughter Barbara as her cousin Erskine Dale. Erskine meets two other cousins, Harry Dale and Hugh Willoughby. Yandell visits Red Oaks. At the county fair at Williamsburg Erskine meets a youth, Dane Grey, and there at once arises a bitter antagonism between them. Grey, in liquor, insults Erskine, and the latter, for the moment all Indian, draws his knife. Yandell disarms him. Ashamed, Erskine leaves Red Oaks that night to return to the wilderness. Yandell, with Harry and Hugh, who have been permitted to visit the Sanders fort, overtake him. At the plantation the boy had left a note in which he gave the property, which is his as the son of Colonel Dale's older brother, to Barbara. The party is met by three Shawnees, who bring news to Erskine (whose Indian name is White Arrow) that his foster father, Kahtoo, is dying and desires him to come to the tribe and become its chief. After a brief visit to the fort Erskine goes to the tribe. He finds there a white woman and her half-breed daughter, Early Storm, and saves the woman from death. He tells Kahtoo he is with the Americans against the British. An enemy, Crooked Lightning, overhears him.

"Tomorrow," said the old chief, "they shall hunt. Each shall take his bow and the same number of arrows at sunrise and return at sundown. . . . The next day they shall do the same with the rifle. It is enough for today."

The first snow fell that night, and at dawn the two lads started out—each with a bow and a dozen arrows. Erskine's woodcraft had not suffered and the night's story of the wilderness was as plain to his keen eyes as a printed page. For two hours he tramped swiftly, but never sign of deer, elk, bear or buffalo.

And then an hour later he heard a snort from a thick copse and the crash of an unseen body in flight through the brush, and he loped after its tracks.

Black Wolf came in at sunset with a bear cub which he had found feeding apart from its mother. He was triumphant, and Crooked Lightning was scornful when White Arrow appeared empty-handed. His left wrist was bruised and swollen, and there was a gash the length of his forearm.

"Follow my tracks back," he said, "until you come to the kill." With a whoop two Indians bounded away and in an hour returned with a buck.

"I ran him down," said White Arrow, "and killed him with the knife. He horned me," and went into his tent.

The bruised wrist and wounded forearm made no matter, for the rifle was the weapon next day—but White Arrow went another way to look for game. Each had twelve bullets. Black Wolf came in with a deer and one bullet. White Arrow told them where they could find a deer, a bear, a buffalo and an elk, and he showed eight bullets in the palm of his hand. And he noted now that the Indian girl was always an intent observer of each contest, and that she always went swiftly back to her tent to tell his deeds to the white woman within.

There was a feast and a dance that night, and Kahtoo could have gone to his fathers and left the lad, young as he was, as chief, but not yet was he ready, and Crooked Lightning, too, bided his time.

Dressed as an Indian, Erskine rode forth next morning with a wampum belt and a talk for the council north where the British were to meet Shawnee, Iroquois and Algonquin, and urge them to enter the great war that was just breaking forth. There was open and angry protest against sending so young a lad on so great a mission, but the old chief haughtily brushed it aside.

"He is young but his feet are swift, his arm is strong, his heart good, and his head is old. He speaks the tongue of the paleface. Besides, he is my son."

One question the boy asked as he made ready:

"The white woman must not be burned while I am gone?"

"No," promised the old chief. And so White Arrow rode forth. Four days he rode through the north woods, and on the fifth he strode through the streets of a town that was yet filled with great forest trees: a town at which he had spent three winters when the game was scarce and the tribe had moved north for good. He lodged with no chief, but slept in the woods with his feet to the fire. The next night he slipped to the house of the old priest, Father Andre, who had taught him some religion and a little French, and the old man welcomed him as a son, though he noted sadly his Indian dress and was distressed when he heard the lad's mission. He was quickly relieved.

"I am no royalist," he said.

"Nor am I," said Erskine. "I came because Kahtoo, who seemed high to death, begged me to come. I am only a messenger and I shall speak his talk; but my heart is with the Americans and I shall fight with them." The old priest put his fingers to his lips:

"Sh—h—h! It is not wise. Are you not known?"

Erskine hesitated.

Earlier that morning he had seen three officers riding in. Following was a youth not in uniform, though he carried a sword. On the contrary, he was dressed like an English dandy, and then he found himself face to face with Dane Grey. With no sign of recognition the boy had met his eyes squarely and passed on.

"There is but one man who does know me and he did not recognize me. His name is Dane Grey. I am wondering what he is doing here. Can you find out for me and let me know?" The old priest nodded and Erskine slipped back to the woods.

At sunrise the great council began. On his way Erskine met Grey, who apparently was leaving with a band of traders for Detroit. Again Erskine met his eyes and this time Grey smiled:

"Aren't you White Arrow?" Somehow the tone with which he spoke the name was an insult.

"Yes."

"Then it's true. We heard that you had left your friends at the fort and become an Indian again."

"Yes."

"So you are not only going to fight with the Indians against the whites, but with the British against America?"

"What I am going to do is no business of yours," Erskine said quietly, "but I hope we shall not be on the same side. We may meet again."

Grey's face was already red with drink and it turned purple with anger.

"When you tried to stab me do you remember what I said?" Erskine nodded contemptuously.

"Well, I repeat it. Whatever the side, I'll fight you anywhere at any time and in any way you please."

"Why not now?"

"This is not the time for private quarrels and you know it."

Erskine bowed slightly—an act that came oddly from an Indian head-dress.

"I can wait—and I shall not forget. The day will come."

The old priest touched Erskine's shoulder as the angry youth rode away.

"I cannot make it out," he said. "He claims to represent an English fur company. His talk is British, but he told one man—last night when he was drunk—that he could have a commission in the American army."

The council fire was built, the flames crackled and the smoke rolled upward and swept through the leafless trees. Three British agents sat on blankets, and around them the chiefs were ranged. All day the powwow lasted. Each agent spoke and the burden of his talk varied very little.

The American palefaces had driven the Indian over the great wall. They were killing his deer, buffalo and elk, robbing him of his land and pushing him ever backward. They were many and they would become more. The British were the Indian's friends—the Americans were his enemies and theirs; could they choose to fight with their enemies rather than with their friends? Each chief answered in turn, and each cast forward his wampum until only Erskine, who had sat silent, remained, and Pontiac himself turned to him.

"What says the son of Kahtoo?"

Even as he rose, the lad saw creeping Lightning, but he appeared not to see. The whites looked surprised when his boyish figure stood straight, and they were amazed when he addressed the traders in French, the agents in English, and spoke to the feathered chiefs in their own tongue. He cast the belt forward.

"That is Kahtoo's talk, but this is mine."

Who had driven the Indian from the great waters to the great wall? The British. Who were the Americans until now? British. Why were the Americans fighting now? Because the British, their kinsmen, would not give them their rights. If the British would drive the Indian to the great wall, would they not go on doing what they charged the Americans with doing now? If the Indians must fight, why fight with the British to beat the Americans, and then have to fight both a later day? If the British would not treat their own kinsmen fairly, was it likely that they would treat the Indian fairly? They had never done so yet. Would it not be better for the Indian to make the white man on his own land a friend rather than the white man who lived more than a moon away across the big seas? Only one gesture the lad made. He lifted his hand high and paused. Crooked Lightning had sprung to his feet with a hoarse cry. Already the white men had grown uneasy, for the chiefs had turned to the boy with startled interest at his first sentence and they could not know what he was saying. But they looked relieved when Crooked Lightning rose, for his was the only face in the assembly that was hostile to the boy. With a gesture Pontiac bade Crooked Lightning speak.

"The tongue of White Arrow is forked. I have heard him say he would fight with the Long Knives against the British. He has never done so yet. Would it not be better for the Indian to make the white man on his own land a friend rather than the white man who lived more than a moon away across the big seas? "What the Community Can Expect from the Schools" they are in the school, and there is no subject so widely and intelligently discussed by the masses as is the subject of education.

This is not surprising, for in addition to the benefits which are directly derived from the schools by those who attend or patronize them, and indirectly even by those who do neither, there are many things which contribute to this general interest. From the homes of the rich and the poor, the native born and the foreign born—the professional classes and the day laborer go the children into the schools.

There they have their victories and their defeats, their glad hours and their sad hours. They mingle with the bright and with the dull. They come under the discipline and instruction of a stranger. It is a new world to the young child—and it remains a distinctive world to the end of his student life.

The school is the topic of conversation in the home. Parents, older brothers and sisters, and even those too young to be in school take an interest in it.

Furthermore, all our people support the school regardless of personal benefits derived therefrom. There is perhaps no interest so vital as a vested interest. Even if people are not directly participating in an enterprise or institution if their money is used in its support they take an interest in it.

The special days in our schools, flag day, arbor day, anniversary days and commencement, all offer the community opportunities for recreation, entertainment and instruction which it is not slow to accept.

As a result of all this there is a very wide and deep interest in the schools notwithstanding the outward seeming indifference and unconcern. So much is the school a part of our lives and our daily living that we take it for granted. We accept the school as we do the hills and valleys about us. Before we were, it was, and we accept it almost as a law of nature.

But, too many people forget, that the public school which is at once, both the great force for higher levels in life and the great leveler, is but one of the five great organized social agencies whose function it is to help the people, each of course in its own distinctive way. It is always a mistake to ask the school to assume the responsibilities and bear the burdens of other institutions. The home, the church, the business world and even the state are offenders here. Delinquent parents demand of the school work which constitutes the chief reason for the home. The church, whose function it is to increase righteousness in the world fakes illegitimate demands upon the school. The business world demands a degree of skill and a power of adjustment which it is never the function of the school to confer or develop. The state demands of the school that it turn out law abiding and public spirited citizens. No one questions that the school has an obligation here, but it is too much to demand such results from the school in the face of dishonest practices in the home, questionable business methods in the market, and graft and misrule in the state.

The one distinctive function of the school is the development of the entire child. The child enters school undeveloped in mind and body. We have a right to expect the school so to train that the child will develop a degree of mental and physical mastery, so to teach that the child shall come from ignorance into the freedom of knowledge, so to give ample and varied opportunities for mental and physical exercises that the child will progress from weakness to strength and efficiency. We have a right to expect the school to cultivate the habit of application and independent thought so that the child will become able to exercise his own initiative and to plan his own program of life. This is the legitimate work of the school and the result the community has a right to expect. There will of course be many by-products, as there are in all life's processes, but the one thing for which the school should aim is the development of the child. Superintendents, teachers, janitors, money expended in laboratories, gymnasiums, libraries, playgrounds, should all make contribution to the development of the child. Whatever makes for the enlarged life of the child—pictures, music, languages, physical appliances—has a place and should be admitted to the school. That which does not should be eliminated.

The community does have a right to expect the school to use every effort to develop an all round child—but it has no right to expect the school to fit and prepare the child for particular work in the world. If the child is developed and his powers fully trained—which work we expect the school to undertake—he will find it comparatively easy to so adjust himself as to meet life's changing vicissitudes. The greatest service the common schools can render the professions, and specialized labor of all kinds, is to turn over to them well developed men and women.

The community has a right to expect that the members of the school board whose duty it is to administer the financial affairs of the school shall be men and women of high intelligence, sound judgment and business ability who are not too much engrossed in their own personal affairs as to be unable to bring to the task the consideration it must have in order to meet its necessities.

They must be men who realize that a low tax levy for educational purposes of the people's money and the poses usually means a misappropriation of the people's money.

We have a right to expect the school board to provide for our children the best possible environments within its limit, in the way of buildings, ventilation, heating, seating, lighting and decorating. The suggestiveness that comes from environment is perhaps the greatest of educational factors. Environment and association determine our disposition whether it be gloomy or cheerful, our tastes whether for languages or mathematics good literature or bad.

A noted lecturer speaks of a gossiping slanderous old woman who was fairly decent when she had on her good clothes. She would not disgrace her clothes.

Good environment makes for good behavior. If we would have children become good men and women with beautiful characters and lofty ideals we must surround them with the good and the beautiful childhood and youth should be happy. It is the beautiful springtime of life and it is the duty of our schools to train the children in those habits that make for joyous happy useful living and to hold constantly before the plastic mind of youth an ideal of the abundant life which is after all the end of living.

Let us take care of youth and age will take care of itself.

The community also has a right to expect that the school board whose office it is to employ teachers shall insist that those teachers have made proper preparation for their work.

Teaching is a profession no less than medicine, law and engineering and the consequences of mistakes and incompetency are even more disastrous. We have a right to ask for trained, competent teachers. Just as the army trains the men who aspire to become officers and leaders so should the state train those who are to lead the children of today into the citizens of tomorrow. Providing trained teachers for our schools is indeed, a problem, but it can be solved.

France, for example, supports with public funds, over two hundred training schools for teachers, selects with care young men and women to fill them as students, pays the board, cost of room, books and instruction of these students while taking the course, provides them with schools at good salaries as long as they teach and when they retire from active service gives them a pension sufficient for their support. Every teacher in the realm is a trained teacher.

We hail with pleasure the advent of women on the school boards, believing as we do that the eternal mother instinct that exists in every woman's heart will constitute her a faithful guardian of child welfare. Also because when mistakes are made as they will always be—the men are given the opportunity to say with Adam in the Garden of Eden, "My Lord, the woman," she is to blame.

We expect the school board to use in the cause of education the same good business principles with which they would manage their own affairs and to use the public money to secure the best possible results to the child. And what has the community a right to expect from the teachers? We believe that our teachers as such have certain duties, the performance of which the community has a right to expect. Duties that are owed to themselves, to each other, to school property, to parents, to pupils, and to the school that employs them.

We expect them to use every effort to improve in the science of teaching and the art of school management, and to attend teachers meetings and educational association. We expect every act and word—and the company them to exercise a watchful care over they keep—and to teach by example as well as by precept.

We expect the teacher to be the man or the woman we hope to see our boys and girls become as years come upon them.

We expect them to be loyal to the superintendent, and all in authority over them, and to extend every courtesy and render every assistance to teachers entering upon duty. We expect them to make the schoolroom a pleasant and attractive place for children, and to take good care of all books, maps, charts and other school property entrusted to them, leaving everything in satisfactory shape at the close of school.

We expect them to try to secure the confidence and cooperation of the parents in their efforts to benefit the children, and to keep those parents informed of the doing and progress of the pupil.

We expect them to know that a child's true education is a growth that can come only from the proper exercise of all his faculties.

We expect them to know that neglect, carelessness, mistakes, are disastrous to the pupils and most difficult to remedy.

We expect them to remember that what a pupil grows to be is of vastly more importance than what he lives to know.

We expect them to make themselves acquainted with the parents of the pupils and members of the community by taking part in local affairs.

Finally, we expect them to be just and impartial in all their dealings with the children. It is easy to love the little girl with the pretty curls and ribbons or the dimpled little boy who lives in the big white house—and brings the biggest red apple to the teacher's desk. But to love the Ruggles, the Wiggles, the Oliver Twists, the Smikes and the Shockeys—children who live "nowhere very much," the teacher must have met face to face with the Great Teacher who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Perhaps the community expects too much.

Destruction of Chinch Bugs Urged

Unless Chinch bugs are checked, their infestation threatens to spread again over the entire Mississippi Valley, and cause a recurrence of the losses of 1887, which would amount to nearly one hundred million dollars, W. P. Flint, state entomologist at the University of Illinois, warned today. Over sixty-five counties in Illinois are now infested with chinch bugs, according to Mr. Flint. We must burn them out, he says.

Unless weather conditions next spring are specially unfavorable for the growth and development of these bugs, or unless steps are taken to destroy them in their winter quarters, serious crop losses are sure to follow.

Chinch bugs destroy or greatly reduce the yield of corn, barley, spring wheat, oats, millet, winter wheat, rye, broom corn, sorghum and other grass crops. They will not feed on legumes—soybeans, sweet and red clover, cowpeas and the like—or in fact on any crop that is not a grass.

Chinch bugs are not all in their winter quarters before the first of November. Burning attractive cover before that date does not kill the bugs, but only causes them to seek shelter in some other place. Effective burning may be done during any dry period from November first to April first. Burning in the fall is by far the best practice, as it not only kills the bugs directly exposed to the heat of the fire, but by destroying the cover, causes the death of other from exposure.

He—What position is that, my dear?"

She—Treasurer.

"No," she snapped, "we sell them."

"Anyway," he said, as he strolled toward the door, "you'll keep the one you were going to sell me. Good morning."

PETERSON, the Tailor

"Hello, Dick; This Is Mother!"

Dick is in college, far away from home and parents, and perhaps a little homesick. The cheery voice of mother, father, sister or—perhaps sweetheart—over the long distance telephone will cheer him wonderfully.

Keep in touch by telephone with the boys and girls away at school. The cost of the service is a trifle compared with the comfort and joy of hearing the children's voices and knowing they are well and in good spirits.

Nothing for Nothing. It was said by all the neighbors of Mr. Tightleigh that he had never been known to give away anything in his life. He either sold it or demanded something in exchange.

On one occasion he was making a long railway journey. The seat directly in front of him was occupied by a man who had been coughing and sneezing at frequent intervals for more than an hour. At last Mr. Tightleigh leaned forward and spoke to him.

"That's a pretty bad cold you seem to have," he said.

"Worst I ever had in my life," wheezed the other.

"Well, I know of a simple and harmless remedy, absolutely sure, that will cure it inside of two days."

"Some patent nostrum?"

"No, you can make it up at home."

"I shall be very grateful if you will tell me what it is."

"I'll do it," said Mr. Tightleigh, narrowing his eyelids, "if you'll tell me what'll drive away these warts I've got on my left hand."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Dog Cures St. Vitus Dance. Curing St. Vitus dance by having a poodle dog sleep with the patient has been announced by a Denver woman as the most effective remedy she has found yet for her two daughters.

The woman, Mrs. J. C. Morris of 2004 South Grant street, declared that for six years she has kept a French poodle dog that alternately sleeps with her young daughters, both of whom are afflicted with St. Vitus dance. One of the daughters, the elder one, now is virtually cured of the disease, according to Mrs. Morris, and the other is showing rapid improvement.

"An old time physician told me about this remedy," Mrs. Morris said, "and as an experiment I tried it and found it more soothing to the nerves of a St. Vitus dance patient than any medicine ever prescribed."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Bernard Shaw's Manners. "Holst by his own petard" was the fate the other day of Bernard Shaw. To a woman of London's best society, who had invited him to lunch he answered with this telegram: "Never in my life! What have I done that you want me to change my cherished habits?" The woman replied with a veritable "lit for tat" in the following dispatch:

"I do not know what your cherished habits are, but I am sure that they are not worth more than your manners."

To this G. B. S. ventured no rejoinder.

Western Bad Man Deceived by Position in Which His Enemy Happened to Have Hand.

Taxewell Woody, famous as Colonel Roosevelt's guide in the West, was standing in a saloon with left elbow on the bar, right hand hanging by his side, and eyes luckily pointed at the mirror behind the bar. He caught in the mirror the reflection of a head poked momentarily into the saloon's doorway, and belonging to a man who had publicly stated his purpose of killing Woody at sight. This man having apparently thought the coast to be clear, and that the saloon contained a sufficient audience, turned his horse, rode through the doorway, and boldly said: "Has any gent here seen that fellow Woody? I'm huntin' for him." At that instant the man realized, for the first time, that Woody was in the room, and he realized also that, though he himself was facing this advantage. He saw that right hand hanging idly down. Woody did not move a muscle. The man's jaw dropped. He remained quiescent for a few seconds, then back out through the doorway, and on his own initiative rode out of the state.

These preannounced attempts on human life were far less bloody than were the onslaughts by the real "killers," the actual "bad men." These latter men did not announce. They merely shot. Billy the Kid, at twenty-three years of age, had committed 23 murders, and had made the question of his extermination a political issue in New Mexico. Incidentally, the sheriff, elected to "get" him, loaded a weapon and "got" him.

In the '80s some "rustlers" "holed up" in a cabin at the outlet of Jackson lake in Wyoming. Rango detectives surrounded them. One of the shooters, a wondrously accurate marksman, seeking to escape, rushed from the cabin's door, and without warning, began to fire. At each shot alternately from his right and left shoulder, thus increasing the width of his zone of fire without making him affect his body, and thereby unduly before he dropped dead at the end of his race of but a few feet.—The Cowboy.
